Market environment, performance analysis and portfolio activity

Equity markets around the world rebounded strongly in December after the decline in the previous month. Investors' optimism returned after early data suggests that the new variant "Omicron" may result in a lower share of hospitalisations and restrictions than previous strains. From mid-month onwards, the rally gained traction after the US Fed clarified its monetary policy for the next couple of months. The revised schedule of faster tapering and possible rate hikes as early as March was mostly expected by markets. The SPI Index ended the month sharply up too. The relative monthly performance has been positively impacted by overweighted Vifor Pharma, Daetwyler and Kuehne+Nagel as well as by underweighted Zur Rose and Credit Suisse. Negatively affected was the relative performance by overweighted BKW, Comet and Straumann as well as by underweighted Novartis and Ems Chemie. In December, we added to Logitech and reduced Swiss Life while ams has been completely sold.
